CONDITIONALS

Conditionals describe the result of a certain condition. The if clause tells you the condition (If you study hard) and the main clause tells you the result (you will pass your exams).

However, it is important to understand the difference between sentences that express general truths or real possibilities, and those that express unreal situations.

CONDITIONALS

There are four types of Conditionals:

Zero Conditional

First Conditional

Second Conditional

Third Conditional

ZERO CONDITIONAL

Use

We use the Zero Conditional to talk about things that are generally true, especially for laws and rules.

Form

if / w*hen* + present simple >> present simple

If you heat ice, it melts.

If you touch fire, you get burned.

When the sun goes down, it gets dark.

The order of the clauses can be changed. “If” can be replaced with “when”.

You get burned if you touch fire.

It gets dark when the sun goes down.

Use

We use the First Conditional when we talk about future situations we believe are real or possible.

Form

if/when + present simple/present perfect >> will + infinitive

If it rains, we'll stay home.

If I find your wallet, I'll let you know.

When I finish work, I'll call you.

When I've read the book, I'll lend it to you.

FIRST CONDITIONAL

The order of the clauses can be changed.

I'll call you when I finish work. (no comma between the clauses)

In this structure unless, as long as, as soon as, before, after or in case can be used instead of if**.

As soon as dinner is ready, I'll call you.

I'll go home after I've done the shopping.

SECOND CONDITIONAL

Use

The Second Conditional is used to imagine present or future situations that are impossible or unlikely in reality.

Form

if + past simple >> would + infinitive

If I won a lot of money, I'd buy a big house in the country.

I wouldn't worry if I were you.

SECOND CONDITIONAL

When if is followed by the verb be, it is grammatically correct to say if I were, if he were, if she were and if it were. However, it is also common to hear these structures with was, especially in the he/she form.

If I were you, I wouldn't talk to him anymore.

If she was rich, she would travel around the world.

She would play with her children if she wasn't so tired.

CONDITIONALS

Imagine two scenarios regarding your future career. First, describe a highly unlikely dream job using the Second Conditional. Then, describe a realistic job you are likely to pursue in the real world using the First Conditional.

e.g.

If a famous company offered me a contract, I would …… (Second Conditional)

If I graduate from my university program, I will ……. (First Conditional)
