07. Listening 2

Shopping_7.3

Listen to Audio 2. Match each given word/phrase 1-10 from the magazine article with a definition A-J.

1. Tool	A a social practice
2. Unaffordable	B that cannot be disputed
3. Prospective	C became successful
4. Purchase	D expected to do or to become something specified
5. Took off	E device
6. Pattern	F some but fewer than many
7. A handful of	G a small amount
8. Undeniable	H model
9. Several	I the action of buying something
10. Rite	J too expensive to buy

07. Listening 2

Shopping_7.4

Listen to Audio 2. Mark each sentence T (true) or F (false)

1. Mobile phones were not very common, a few years ago. _____
2. The early models of mobile phones were too cheap. _____
3. In the 1900s, many people were able to buy the first cars produced. _____
4. A lot of people like leaving home and going shopping. _____
5. When you buy online, you must choose quickly. _____
6. When you buy online, you can see a variety of products faster. _____
7. An advantage of online shopping is that it takes less time to do. _____
8. People like buying cars online. _____
9. A lot of people buy jewellery online. _____
10. Not many people like buying food online. _____

0 7. Listening 2 Keys

7.3	1E	2J	3D	4I	5C	6H	7G	8B	9F	10A
7.4	1T	2F	3F	4T	5F	6T	7T	8F	9F	10T

Centro Linguistico di Ateneo
Excellence in Linguistic Training

07. Listening 2 Script

Traditional Shopping vs/ Online Shopping – Audioscript 2

Everybody knows that technology is part of our daily life, and online shopping is no exception. In the last years we've been using, and we have become familiar, with words like 'smartphones', 'tablets' or 'applications', and nowadays it is simply impossible for young people to imagine what life was like before the high-tech era.
But what about shopping? How can online shopping compare to traditional shopping?

When the early mobile phones appeared, not many people would have predicted their success and yet, within a few years, they have become a "necessary" tool in the life of millions of people. Originally, mobile phones were unaffordable for most prospective buyers, then they gradually became less expensive, and were developed to satisfy the needs of as many clients as possible.

This kind of technological revolution had already occurred in the last century, in the automobile sector. The earliest models of cars were too expensive for ordinary people to purchase. Then, the car market took off and, until today, has been very successful. Now almost every family owns at least one car. Other inventions have also followed a similar pattern, throughout history.

Traditional shopping involves a number of popular, widely spread feelings, like the idea of leaving the house and spending time in the city centre, seeing people (often a lot of people!) who are doing the same thing, the pleasure (for some, at least) to look for an item in different shops until they find the suitable one, coming across a different item which suits them better, haggling on the price (for instance, in a street market).

07. Listening 2 Script

All this is not part of the online shopping experience.

Online purchasing means that you stay at home, comfortably sitting on your sofa, making a choice with no rush and paying in a click. You often do it on your own or with a family member, and in a handful of seconds you can view more items than you could in an entire afternoon of traditional, "live" shopping.

It may sound impersonal, but it has a number of undeniable advantages: no pressure, no driving along busy roads to overcrowded shopping centres, no queues at the till, a huge selection of products on hand and above all, time saving! So, will online shopping completely replace traditional shopping? Will we all buy from home, avoiding any contact with other people?

Probably not, for several reasons. Firstly, not all items are equally suitable for online purchasing: think of cars, houses, or luxury items in general. Also, it's difficult to believe that many people would buy food they can't see, and maybe touch or smell. Finally, the rite of going shopping is too popular for it to disappear… in a click!