The Couple That Survived Six Natural Disasters During Their Honeymoon – Audioscript 1

It all started innocently in Munich, Germany, when Erika and Stefan missed their flight to Singapore. That was no natural disaster, it was just an inconvenience. But this typical travelling blunder was only the beginning for the family.

Erika and Stefan met when they were working together on a project in Sweden. They kept in touch for a couple of years through Facebook, and eventually Stefan asked Erika out on a date. It wasn't a typical dinner and a movie. Instead, for their first date, the couple went on a scuba diving trip to Egypt! They talked and talked and fell head over heels in love!

They had a passion, and that was travelling. After their daughter's birth, they embarked on a four-month holiday, an adventure holiday, hiking and diving their way across half a dozen countries. After this adventure we could call it a honey-monsoon instead of a honeymoon!

Their trip took them from their home in Sweden through several different countries, including Indonesia, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, and China. But Erika had never anticipated what Mother Nature had planned for her family. Erika says that they wanted to see and do a lot of things, but that didn't include natural disasters!

It all started with a monsoon in Indonesia. Erika, Stefan, and their baby daughter were travelling along the top of a mountain along a narrow road, when a sudden wind picked up. The gale ripped the roof off the bus they were riding on. The wind was roaring and shaking the bus. Fortunately, no one was injured.

Next stop was Australia: they didn't have a visa and you need one if you want to travel to Australia. They didn't know that!

They got to Perth, Australia, and there they experienced a bush fire, followed by a ferocious cyclone in the northeast of Australia. Cairns is known for its barrier reef, great diving, to sum up, a life experience.

Then off to New Zealand, Auckland, but an earthquake hit Christchurch. Next, was Japan. While they were having lunch, the whole place started shaking, and they had to go outside. They had never experienced anything like that! The pattern became one natural disaster after another. By the end of their four-month trip, the family had encountered a blizzard, a monsoon, a bush fire, a cyclone, and two earthquakes.

Erika and Stefan overcame it all with their baby daughter.

Looking back, the trip was disastrous, but Erika says it taught her that she and Stefan can make it through just about anything!
