Travelling Nowadays – Audioscript 2

It's easy to travel nowadays, we google a place, look it up and decide. We can choose the perfect low-cost flight and off we go. Just a click here and a click there, and we get a seat on the plane, or on the train or on the bus. Usually we like booking the trip on a website because there are a lot of online deals, and that's how we usually like to book or make a reservation for our accommodation. And, you know, we're convinced that we spend less, both money and time, than going to a travel's agent.

There could be a downside though, I mean, it could be that the hotel or apartment is not exactly like the photos we've seen online.

Going by plane is ok if we have to travel far, but I have my doubts when we travel in the same country. Let's face it: we have to show up at the airport an hour prior to departure and then it takes ages to get on and off the flight. Then we take a shuttle that drives us to the city centre – because that's where we usually need to go – and… how long did that flight last? And oh, I forgot, if we travel with luggage, it could be a piece or two, it doesn't really matter, because we have to check them in. And when at destination we go to the conveyor belt (baggage reclaims) to pick our luggage up.

If we take the high-speed train or the bullet train, most likely we'll end up in the same place at the same time or even earlier. The train stops at the train station in the centre of the city and from there it's easy peasy to get to wherever we need to.

In whatever way we travel, we need to book a seat. And hopefully we won't sit near a crying baby or child, or a complaining old person. Or a young teenager who will listen to music during the whole flight.

Be aware that we could need a visa, which is not a credit card like many of us may think it is, but a document that gives us permission to stay in the country we are travelling to, and if you listened to my previous audio you now know that to go to Australia you need a visa wherever you come from!

Before departure, it's also important to take a look at the weather forecast: usually there are some surprises that we don't take into account when booking online or through an App.

Thank you for listening.
